RACE QUESTION ALIVE

Inducted Largely Into Virginia Campaign.

Special From a Staff Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., October 28.-When the new constitution of Virginia was proclaimed ally made that the disfranchisement of the great body of the colored voters would result in a more equal division of the white vote of the state, as it would no longer be possible to have the race question play a part in the campaigns. Indeed, it has been proclaimed and believed all over the south that the elimination of the colored voter would so thoroughly do way with the race question that the people would turn their attention to general national and state issues and that in such discussions the colored people would play no part. The present campaign in Virginia gives ample proof that this expectation has not been realized.

When the fall campaign opened here it was expected by many that the principles of the republican and the democratic parties would be the keynotes of the spellbinders. Although only state issues were involved it was expected that there would be a good deal of weight given to the claims of the two parties to the basic principles for which they stand. No accurate figures are accessible to show the exact number of colored voters who have been disfran-chised by the new constitution of the state, but that number is in excess of 100,000. The democrats claim that there have been registered for the election of November 7 about 25,000 colored voters, but republicans are not inclined to accept those figures as cor-rect. They do not believe that the registered colored voters would aggregate any-thing like 25,000. Exact statistics to show the facts are not accessible. But whatever the number may be the great body of colored voters who are practically sure to vote for the republican candidates in this, as well keeping the race issue alive. "How can there be danger of negro dom-ination when the percentage of colored voters to the whole number of voters in the state is so small?" I asked one of the demeratic leaders.

as in national elections, is ample reason for

"Negro domination," he replied, "does not mean that the negroes of this state are to hold the offices and be in control of the state government. So long as there is a great body of the colored people here whose votes, in the case of a close division of the white votes, will decide what party is to be n power there will be negro domination." That is the very general feeling among the democrats who have fought the idea of permitting the colored vote to be influential in the affairs of the state. The fact is the great body of the white people of the state are not reconciled to the idea of permitting the colored voters to have any prominence in politics. The republi-can party, so far as its management in Richmond is concerned, and the condi-tions in the entire state are very similar, is not a mixture of white and colored people. The meeting in this city, at which Judge L. L. Lewis, the republican candidate for governor, and Capt. William P. Kent, republican candidate for lieutenant governor, spoke, was attended solely by white people. There was not a single colwhite people. There was not a single col-ored man or woman there. They were not expected to come and they did not.

Negro Not Referred To.

In the addresses that were made the colored voters were not referred to, except to deny some statements in reference to the colored race. Even when the disfranchising clause of the new constitution was referred to it was in connection with the statement that it affected 100,000 white voters, no special reference being made to the colored people. Judge Lewis denied in the most emphatic manner that he had ever said anything to make him subject the said anything to make him subject to the colored people. Therefore, as the situation stands today, the bulk of expense in this campaign must be borne personally by Senator Gorman and several of the party workers whose means will permit of large contributions. It is said, however, that unless these gento the charge that has been circulated that about twenty-five years ago he favored marriages between the races. This charge was published, and in spite of the denial by the man who was said to have made it it has raveled over the state at the speed of the proverbial wildfire.

The feeling toward the colored people on the part of a large body of the whites is not friendly toward their promotion in the community in any way that will allow them any influence in political matters. In many sections this feeling is intense. A great many men who formerly declared that education would lift the mass of the colored cation would not the mass of the colored people to a higher plane of usefulness as citizens are reconsidering that idea. This statement is not made with partisan bias on the part of at least many of those who are unimated by such feelings. It is repeated exists and which is playing a great part in the campaign now in progress. It applies especially to what is known as the "black belt," and to those parts of the state that have considerable colored population. One hears on all sides that the younger generation of colored men and women, who have received a common school education, are not doing such work as is open to them as well as did the "old time" colored people. To a very large extent the employment in this state that is open to the younger generation of the colored people is that which was open to their fathers. There is a limited field for the exercise of ability gained by education, but it is very limited. It is not open to the great body of the colored people who pass through the schools. And yet the ability to read and write gained in the schools permits these people to claim a right to be registered as voters. All this feeling over the education of the colored people is now having a practical effect on the election, and it has been brought out and accentuated by a plank in the republican platform which declares in favor of free school books for all school children. The republican party took up as its most important issue what it termed the improvement of the school system of the state. It claimed that, especially in the country districts, the schools are badly in country districts, the schools are badly in need of improvement, and one of the first things they wanted to do was to supply free school books, both because it was claimed that that was one of the progressive methods adopted all over the country and because, as a whole, the books could be bought cheaper in that way. It is claimed many children are practically barred from attending school because their parents could not supply them with books.

Democrats Interested.

The democrats replied that they too are interested in the improvement of the schools of the state and propose in a practical way to work out that problem. But they say that while the colored people of Virginia contribute in the way of taxes but $85,000 toward the school fund, they are given for the support of their schools $425,000, and that, they declare, is enough. In other words, the white people of the state, be-sides contributing everything for the maintenance of their own schools, pay $345,000 for the maintenance of the colored schools, and if the expense of those schools is inand if the expense of those schools is in-creased that increase will come from the white taxpayers. They also say that the law now provides that the salaries of teach-ers shall be paid from the state funds, while the school buildings and school supplies are provided by the counties and requires that pupils who are the children of indigent parents shall be provided with books free of charge. They say that the results from the education of the colored people do not warrant having all these pupils, whether their parents are able to buy their books or not, given books free of charge to be paid for from the state funds raised from the taxation of white people.

All this also has an especial bearing on matters political. An increase in the number of colored children who can read and write means an increase in the number that can claim a right to be registered as voters. The idea that some of the younger genera-tion of the colored people may come up to vote the democratic ticket does not affect the situation. The leaders of the demo-cratic party here declare that they can be brought to vote the democratic ticket only by having the democrats hold out to the by naving the democrats hold out to them special inducements of some kind to join the party, and they say they do not propose to "go into that business."

ment of the colored schools.

Prominent democrats declare that the raising of this question will lead not only to a refusal to provide free school books, but that it may bring forward in a promi-nent way the entire matter of colored schools, with the result of promoting the idea that already exists among some of them, that the colored people should be made to provide for the education of their own race. How such a result could be brought about without hampering the entire school system of the state is not plain, but there is no doubt that there is a con-siderable body of the people who are in-clined to such a policy. POLITICS IN MARYLAND

DESPERATE EFFORTS BY BOTH PARTIES TO WIN.

BALTIMORE, Md., October 28, 1905.

With the advocates and opponents of the disfranchising amendment both professing to see victory ahead, the homestretch in the most desperately fought campaign in the history of Maryland is reached. The campaign marks an epoch in state politics, for it has been clearly demonstrated that Senator Gorman has lost his grip on control of the democratic organization. Men who for decades had followed the dictation of the senator are today in open revolt and on the hustings denouncing what they term the "iniquitous Poe amendment." Every effort has been made by the state boss to whip these recalcitrants into line, without avail, and today Senator Gorman can only rally around his standard a few of the trusted lieutenants out of the hundreds who were ready and even eager to carry out his orders for the past quarter of a century. These party workers are, however, putting forth every effort to elect the democratic legislative ticket, and at the same time not neglecting a point calculated to defeat the Poe plan at the polls.

During the coming week the anti-amendment democrats and the republicans will hold a number of mass-meetings in this city, while the Gorman democrats will close the campaign with a mass-meeting at the Lyric next Saturday night, when Senator Gorman is slated to be the star speaker.
The Lyric will also be the scene next week of a great demonstration under the auspices of the Anti-Poe Amendment Democratic Association. The speakers on this occasion will be Senator Rayner and Mr. Edgar S. Gans, one of the most prominent members of the Reform League and a notable figure among independent demo-crats of this city.

Antis Have Advantage. In this campaign the opponents of the Poe plan have a great advantage over the Gorman wing of the party, inasmuch as all the noted stump speakers, with the exception of former Representative Joshua W. Miles and Mr. John P. Poe, are exerting their efforts to encompass the defeat of the measure. It was because of this lack of oratorical talent that Chairman Vandiver sent out invitations to governors of the southern states to come to Maryland to lend their aid in the campaign for Senator Gorman's pet scheme. Thus far only one state executive—Gov. Aycock of North Carolina—has appeared upon the rostrum in behalf of the Poe plan, and even the true-blue organization men will admit that he did not win any votes to the Gorman

Then, too, the democratic organization is short on funds, the great majority of those who in the past had furnished the "sinews" of war" to the state central committee hav-ing refused point blank to give anything for this campaign. In several instances the contribution has gone into the treasury of the anti-amendment association. Therefore, as the situation stands today, It is said, however, that unless these gentlemen have good and sufficient proof that there is a chance of carrying the amend-ment through there will be no money forthcoming, the senator preferring to use the money to elect the legislature in 1907, which will return a United States senate

Two Statements Compared.

Under the caption "Does Negro Domination Exist in Maryland?" the anti-amendment association in a circular compares a statement made by Cardinal Gibbons with one made by former Representative Joshua W. Miles. This circular is in part as fol-

"At the democratic state convention, Mr. Joshua W. Miles said he represented the 'stricken counties of the state' and that he brought 'a pathetic message, which comes direct from the hearts and homes of thousands of the men and women of Maryland, who feel the degradation of the social and political conditions that surround them.'
"In only three counties in Maryland was the colored population approximately equal to the white by the federal census of 1900. These counties are Calvert, Charles and St. Marys. In these counties, then, we must expect to find the worst conditions. Yet of two of these counties, Charles and St. Mary's, Cardinal Gibbons writes as follows in the October number of the North American Review: "In the lower counties of Maryland the white and the black population are nearly equally divided, and the great majority of both races profess the Catholic religion. I have had frequent occasions to visit these untles in the exercises of the sacred min-stry.

"Before divine services began I have been delighted to observe the whites and the blacks assemble together in the church grounds and engaged in friendly and familiar intercourse. Then they repaired to the church, worshiping under the same roof, kneeling before the same altar, re-ceiving the sacrament at the same railing, and listening to the words of the sam

Gospel.

"This equal participation in spiritual gifts and privileges has fostered the feeling of goodwill and benevolence which no human legislation could accomplish. I never witnessed anywhere else the white race so kind and considerate to the colored, nor the colored race so respectful and deferential to the white; for there was no attempt in these weekly gatherings to level the existing social distinctions. As far as my mem-ory serves me the records of these two counties have never been stained by a sin-gle instance of an outrage and a lynch-

Views of Chairmen.

Chairman Hanna of the republican state central committee is sanguine that the amendment will be defeated, but warns the republicans that they must not become overconfident. He urges that work against the amendment be kept up until the polls close on November 7 next. Under the direction of Chairman Hanna a systematic campaign has been conducted against the Poe plan, literature being sent into all sec-tions of the state setting forth the danger that threatens the elective franchise in Maryland.

Chairman Vandiver of the democratic state central committee says the amendment is sure to be ratified and that the democrats will also elect a majority of the candi-dates for the house of delegates. The chairman does not give any figures as yet, but as usual will make the announcement on the eve of election that "we will win t 12,000 to 15,000 majority." J. M. D.
